HUMAN RACE
- HISTORY

HUMAN RACE - HISTORY

In southern Europe, the Greeks (and later the Romans), in an era known as "classical antiquity," established cultures whose practices, laws, and customs are considered the foundation of contemporary Western culture. There were a number of regional empires during this period. The kingdom of the Medes helped to destroy the Assyrian Empire in tandem with the nomadic Scythians and the Babylonians. Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, was sacked by the Medes in 612 BCE.

HUMAN RACE - HISTORY

The Median Empire gave way to successive Iranian empires, including the Achaemenid Empire (550–330 BCE), the Parthian Empire (247 BCE–224 CE), and the Sasanian Empire (224–651 CE).

Several empires began in modern-day Greece. First was the Delian League (from 477 BCE) and the succeeding Athenian Empire (454–404 BCE), centered in present-day Greece. Later, Alexander the Great (356–323 BCE), of Macedon, founded an empire of conquest, extending from present-day Greece to present-day India.

HUMAN RACE - HISTORY

The empire divided shortly after his death, but the influence of his Hellenistic successors made for an extended Hellenistic period (323–31 BCE) throughout the region.

In Asia, the Maurya Empire (322–185 BCE) existed in present-day India in the 3rd century BCE, most of South Asia was united to the Maurya Empire by Chandragupta Maurya and flourished under Ashoka the Great.

Fascinating facts

FASCINATING FACTS

1. When a child is born to the Orang Rimba tribe of Indonesia, the umbilical cord is planted under a Sentubung tree. The child has a sacred bond with that tree for the rest of their life, and for the Orang Rimba, cutting down a “birth tree” is equivalent to murder.

2. To plow land is to “scratch the breast” of Mother Earth, say India’s Baiga people, believing God created the forests to provide everything humans need and gave the Baiga wisdom to find it. Only people that God didn’t give this knowledge to must farm to survive.

FASCINATING FACTS

3. India's Niyamgiri Hills soak up the monsoon's rain, giving rise to more than a hundred perennial streams and rivers, including the Vamshadhara river. The Dongria Kondh tribe who inhabit this lush landscape call themselves "Jharnia", meaning Protector of Streams.

4. Unlike us, the Arhuaco people of Colombia's Sierra Nevada take great responsibility for the wellbeing of the planet, seeing it as their job to keep Mother Earth in harmony. They see droughts and famines as a consequence of human failure to keep the world in balance.

The background is a textured, light brown color. In the top left, there are five yellow circles of varying sizes above a white wavy line. In the top right, there is a black grid pattern. Below the grid is a large, light pink circle with a thick brown ring around it. In the bottom left, there is a brown wireframe structure of a cube. In the bottom center, there is a circular pattern of small, light brown dashes. In the bottom right, there are six small, dark blue dots arranged in a 2x3 grid.

Historical Significance

In the beginning of 1927 to 1934 there was a regular routine. At 6:00 every morning, the Mother appeared on the ashram balcony to initiate the day with her blessings.

Sadhaks would have woken very early and completed a good portion of the day's work including meditation and then assembled under the balcony to receive her blessings.
