HUMAN HISTORY

HUMAN RACE - HISTORY

From the 3rd century CE, the Gupta dynasty oversaw the period referred to as ancient India's Golden Age. From the 4th to 6th centuries, northern India was ruled by the Gupta Empire. In southern India, three prominent Dravidian kingdoms emerged: the Cheras, Cholas and Pandyas. The ensuing stability contributed to heralding in the golden age of Hindu culture in the 4th and 5th centuries.

The ancient empires faced common problems associated with maintaining huge armies and supporting a central bureaucracy.

HUMAN RACE - HISTORY

These costs fell most heavily on the peasantry. Barbarian pressure on the frontiers hastened internal dissolution. China's Han dynasty fell into civil war in 220 CE, beginning the Three Kingdoms period, while its Roman counterpart became increasingly decentralized and divided about the same time in what is known as the Crisis of the Third Century.

The great empires of Eurasia were all located on temperate and subtropical coastal plains. From the Central Asian steppes, horse-based nomads, mainly Mongols and Turks, dominated a large part of the continent.

HUMAN RACE - HISTORY

The development of the stirrup and the breeding of horses strong enough to carry a fully armed archer made the nomads a constant threat to the more settled civilizations. The gradual break-up of the Roman Empire, spanning several centuries after the 2nd century CE, coincided with the spread of Christianity outward from the Middle East.

The Western Roman Empire fell under the domination of Germanic tribes in the 5th century and these polities gradually developed into a number of warring states, all associated in one way or another with the catholic church.

FACTS

Fascinating facts

☀ The Arhuaco people of Colombia's Sierra Nevada take great responsibility for the wellbeing of the planet, seeing it as their job to keep Mother Earth in harmony. They see droughts and famines as a consequence of human failure to keep the world in balance.

Arhuaco people

Chambri people

☀ Women were traditionally the main breadwinners among the Chambri people of Papua New Guinea. They did all the fishing and took the extra fish they caught out into the surrounding hills to trade with other tribes.

Fascinating facts

☀ Bayaka fathers spend approximately half the day near their babies. They even offer them a nipple to suck if the child is crying, and the mother or another woman is not available. It is not uncommon to wake in the night and hear a father singing to his child.

Zo'é people

Bayaka fathers

☀ Monogamy is not a universal human trait. The Zo'é people of the Amazon are polygamous, both men and women may have more than one partner. Everyone is equal in Zo'é society and traditionally there were no leaders. All wear the a long wooden lip plug.

Historical Significance

14th JULY
THEN

Bastille Day is celebrated with great festivity in Pondicherry, a former French colony, every year. On the eve of the Bastille Day, retired soldiers parade and celebrate the day with Indian and French National Anthems, honoring the French soldiers who were killed in the battles. Throughout the celebration, French and Indian flags fly alongside each other, projecting the mingling of cultures and heritages
